Colonial Theatre.

May Allison, Sessue Hayakawa, William S. Hart, Enid Bennett, William Farnum and Viola Dana in Latest Attractions the Next Few Days.

Beautiful May Allison in the five act Metro play "Social Hypocrites," Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in a Metro comedy, a Paramount Photoplay and cartoon will compose Thursday's feature program. "Social Hypocrites" is a brilliant drama in which the blighting influences of a lie are traced through two generations. May Allison plays the intensely interesting part of Lenore Fielding, daughter of the man falsely accused of card cheating. The lie ruins his life and bids fair to wreck her own. At a social game of bridge, malicious people try to prove that in the handling of cards she is truly her father's daughter. A distinguished cast is seen in this distinguished play which gives a faithful picture of English society.

We take pleasure to announce that Sessue Hayakawa, the famous Japanese screen star, whose artistic work in Paramount pictures has placed him in the front rank of cinema artists, will be seen in his latest photoplay, "The Bravest Way," at our theatre next Friday. Mr. Hayakawa is distinguished for the finished artistry which characterizes all of his screen portrayals, and all who saw him in his recent photoplays of "Hidden Pearls" and "The Honor of His House," two of his most successful starring vehicles, may be assured that his portrayal of the role of an humble gardener in "The Bravest Way," who sacrifices his love through loyalty to the memory of a murdered friend, is one of the most artistic of his cinema career. Friday there will also be shown a Montgomery Film comedy and the Animated Feature.

A novelty presenting William S. Hart, the famous Thomas H. Ince Artcraft star, in a role wherein he exhibits extreme egotism, is in itself original and yet in the end, the selfishness of this man is overcome by love of a good, pure woman. It is in the role of "Selfish Yates," in the picture of the same name just released, in which Mr. Hart doubtless will again score a decisive hit with his admirers who will see it Saturday. The locale of "Selfish Yates" is, as in all of Mr. Hart's portrayals, a mining town with the inevitable dance hall and gambling den, that are part and parcel of such communities. The regeneration of "Selfish Yates," through his love for Mary Adams, a trip, innocent, trusting girl, is so different from the theme of any other story in which Mr. Hart has been heretofore as to make it a distinct creation and he gets out of it all that was written into the part of "Selfish Yates" by C. Gardner Sullivan, the talented author, and more. A Pathe Comedy and Hearst News will complete Saturday's fine offering.

And, in the pretty and popular Australian screen star, makes her Paramount debut under the auspices of Thomas H. Ince on Monday in "The Keys of the Righteous." This is a story of the life and adventures of Mary Manning in the woods of Wisconsin with her invalid mother, her grim old grandfather and an uncle. Her mother has been waiting each day for eighteen years for the return of her father, a delirious now, and a drunkard in a nearby town. When he finally does come, it is only in time to be present at his wife's funeral, for the shock of the reunion proves too much for her slender strength. Without even Tom Gale, the strong young woodsman who had come to take so large a place in her life and who had recently gone away on a trip, Mary is left to struggle alone. Her efforts to guard her father from further "backsliding" and the great sacrifice she makes for him later, earns for her not only happiness and the great love of Tom Gale, but also the affection of her crusty old grandfather.

The screen achievements of William Farnum, the popular William Fox star have been as numerous as they were brilliant but in "The Heart of a Lion" the six reel feature to be shown Tuesday, Bill is to be seen at his best. "The Heart of a Lion" is taken from Ralph Connor's famous novel "The Doctor" and will be enjoyed by all. Mutt and Jeff and the Current Events round out Tuesday's program.

Wednesday that adorable little star, Viola Dana, is offered in the artistic triumph "The Weaver of Dreams," a five part Metro Wonderplay.

The Community Chautauqua

A Great Success and Weather Conditions Fine.

The weather conditions were unusually good with the exception of the excessive heat of Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Not a drop of rain fell during the five days of July 24th to 28th inclusive.

The local management, Morris L. Slugg, chairman of the general committee, Charles E. Rhoades of the ticket committee and Lynwood B. Thompson of the grounds attended to every detail and worked in harmony with the Chautauqua management in the most friendly relations.

Miss Ethel Rogers, who sold 108 course tickets, won the championship of the world, which was previously held with the sale of 60 tickets.

The junior branch of the program was of unusual interest from the time of the street parade until the close of Saturday afternoon. They were taught play ground exercises, drills, etc., were taken to the City Park for recreation and lunch and presented a pageant of the Allies at the open to the public. This feature will be given even more prominence in the season of 1919, as the local parents appreciate what care and consideration the management give the children.

The opening musical attraction was by the Fisher Ship Concert Co., and they will be gladly welcomed again by all who heard them this season. Their group of 18th century songs in costume and the mandolin story of John Henry's Adventure, were among the best attractions of the course. Miss Shipp, the head of the company, was excellent in her character parts.

The lecture Wednesday evening by Dr. Joseph Clare of London was a very vivid portrayal of the Russian Revolution by an eye witness, as he was in Petrograd as pastor of the British-American (Congregational) church for five years and left that country with his wife and three children only when it was next to impossible to obtain food. Germany had taken it all, and even money availed a person little. When he first went to Russia, a beefsteak could be bought for 11 cents per pound, and now it costs $2.25 per pound. An apple costs $1, and for three lemons Dr. Clare had to pay 75 cents apiece. A blue serge suit cost $125 a short time before he left, and although it was of inferior quality, that same suit today costs $500. Blue serge purchased by the yard cost $27. Of the fuel situation, he said that where previously his church had paid $350 per year, in 1917 they had to pay $4,000 for the fuel supply. Everyone had to stand in line for bread, or even shoes. He was frank and fearless in his expressions of condemnation of Russia's royalty in their degradation, of the treachery of her high officials, of the awful ravages of war caused by Germany's treachery. He urged all to think of the great nation charitably as she is ignorant now, but will learn with the aid of this country and of the other Allies.

Russia saved Paris by the lives of her peasant soldiers who fought while unprepared and almost unarmed, but kept a sector of the German army away from France and the march on to Paris. In the minds of the speaker America was kept out of the war for a time because she could not stand for Russia's form of government and the principles for which it stood, the slavery of her subjects, etc. Almost as soon as Russia rebelled and overthrew the Czar, America declared war on Germany. In his closing Dr. Clare was most eloquent in his tribute to America for what she is doing in this world war and predicted that she would give a like service in assisting Russia. This lecture was worth a great deal to the thinking people in his large audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Winters were delightful entertainers, particularly in their impersonation sketches of bird songs and calls. The original number—the Canary's Wooing by Mrs. Winters—was of the best and showed an intimate knowledge of nature. Mr. Winters was equally well received in his talking songs and piano monologues.

J. Franklin Caveny, the poetic cartoonist and rapid clay modeler, is one of the best in the country. He is certainly busy during his hour on the platform as he uses both hands with his crayon, keeps up a rapid conversation of current events and ideas and has his eyes on the audience for up to the minute hits, etc.

Albert E. Wiggam is as convincing as well informed of affairs on the Western Front as Dr. Clare is on Russia. In his handling of "The Life of Our Boys in France" and the great work of the Red Cross his lecture is of vital importance. He has been intimately associated with officers and soldiers in camp, drives and hospital and his experiences as reporter and newspaper man has enabled him to pick out what is most important. His explanation of the souvenirs brought from France and the recent invented life saving suit would be a lecture in themselves. His arraignment of Germany was as severe as polite language would permit.

The Royal Hawaiian Singers and players stand in a class by themselves and their interesting personality, particularly of their leader, appeal to the American audiences. One is a pianist, two play ukuleles, and two play guitars. Their music was sweet, harmonious and pathetic, and once heard is never forgotten. George W. Vierra of Honolulu is said to be the foremost interpreter of this unique music of the Pacific isles. Especially pleasing were the selections on the steel guitar, and the Hula dance. All will remember the bugle call, as it was faintly heard in the distance, accompanied by the drum beats. They wear their own picturesque costumes of white with dashes of purple and orange. They, too, had their messages of their part in the world war and were eloquent in their expressions of loyalty to America and appreciation of what she has done and is doing. Their leader said: "We love you American people and we extend you courtesies from our heart."

Ralph Parlette in his lecture on "The University of Hard Knocks" chained and held the attention of practically every man, woman and child within the sound of his voice. He has a practical message for all, as in his versatility he can be and is a professor, a poet, a philosopher and a humorist in the broad subject he handles without gloves. Mr. Parlette had in his left hand a black bag which said contained the third chapter of his lecture, which would be revealed at the proper time. After explaining in his own quaint way the bumps, bumper and bumper which one always meets in life's journey, he took from the black bag a small glass jar containing rice and walnuts, and demonstrated the fact that by shaking the jar, the smaller objects always went to the bottom and the larger to the top thus making a strong illustration of a sermon in itself. To remain at the "top" in life's journey one must grow, was the lesson and no matter how much one is jostled, shaken and knocked, if he is large enough he will still remain at the top. Mr. Parlette also in a few concise sentences placed the situation of the Southern front before the Chautauqua audience. Armenia, to-day, spells tragedy. It is the purpose of Germany to see that the Turks destroy this Christian and long suffering nation and it remains for America to save Armenia. His good cheer, his assumed quaintness, and fascination as a story teller make him a study for his audience as they listen spellbound and wonder what he will say next. It is hoped by many that he will be on next year's program.

The famous Kilites Band, with Alfred E. Zealley, director, was received with rounds and rounds of applause. They appeared in full regimental costume and were fine specimens of men as well as wonderful musicians. The French horn solos were greatly admired. The solo dancer and bagpiper also became general favorites. One selection, "A Morning in Noah's Ark," was given for the children, but was equally well appreciated by the adults. The Hunter's Song was beautifully rendered. Director Zealley at the outbreak of the war was made brigade bandmaster of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and when occasion would allow it he went into trench service and four times went over the top. In a straightforward and earnest way he told his experiences revealing his sturdy manhood and loyal patriotism. He was listened to with a breathless silence far more complimentary than applause, and the latter was meted out to him without stint. He has been shell-shocked and slightly wounded, but it is for physical troubles brought on by exposure in the trenches that he has been honorably discharged from active service.

The Weber Male Quartet of New York City furnished the musical program for Sunday, the closing day and their program of sacred songs and hymns was worth far more than the course tickets cost. Their rendering of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Still, Still With Thee," will long remain a pleasant memory to all good music lovers. Not a line of their selections need be lost for their enunciation is clear and distinct and their voices blended by long association into an almost perfect accord. "Keep The Home Fires Burning" was received with profuse applause and at the suggestion of Prof. Barnes the audience joined in the chorus. As a closing number he also suggested that all stand and join in America.

Wallace Bruce Ambsary, a poet, dramatist and publicist gave brief biographical sketches of Rudyard Kipling and James Whitcomb Riley, and recited several of their poems illustrating their author's chief characteristics. Mr. Ambsary's work is absolutely different from most men who appear on the platform in lecture-recital. He introduces you to Kipling and Riley and you seem to see these men as you never have before and learn new lessons from poems you have repeatedly read.

A great deal of the credit of the financial success of the course is due Dr. W. L. West, chairman of the advertising committee, who began early and worked carefully in the distribution of the programs, etc., and to Charles E. Rhoades who did excellent work on the ticket committee. The small surplus left after the expenses were all paid, with the $47 raised in the Sunday night collection, was given to the local Red Cross. The attendance was very good at every performance and lecture. There are about 80 on the guarantor's list for next year's course, but it is hoped to increase it to one hundred.

ONE STAKE IN THE GAME.

The situation in Africa before the present war throws at least a sidelight on the cause of the jealousy and the hatred which Germany felt of England and France. Africa is a large continent, larger by 44 per cent than the whole of North America and a little more than three times larger than the United States including Alaska. Of this vast country, rich in natural resources, England held a little more than one-third. France owned almost two-fifths, while Germany held less than one-twelfth. The rest of the "dark continent" was held by Spain, Portugal, Italy and Belgium. About all the real Africa which remained was the great desert. All these European nations, especially England, France and Germany, have been intriguing for years to grab African territory, because there could be obtained raw materials at a low cost. Many people assume that Africa is mostly a desert, but it has twenty times as much productive soil as England, France and Germany combined have in Europe, and its extended latitude not only makes possible the production of every thing which these countries produce but many other things. England and France owned more than eight times as much of these lands as did Germany, and the latter country found itself overweighed in the race for industrial and commercial supremacy. Germany knew that if she attempted to drive England and France out of Africa the fatterland would be invaded and devastation would follow in the track of the invaders. She preferred to fight in Belgium and in France and let them suffer the devastation. She could see that after England and France were defeated she could steal their African possessions and those of Portugal, Spain, Italy and Belgium at the same time. Germany believed that Russia would be a weak ally against her and in this she was right, as events have proved. When she entered Belgium she was thoroughly equipped and supplied for a long war, but expected to achieve a victory within a year. Our spineless attitude during the first months of the submarine warfare led her to believe that we were either a Nation of cowards or were hypnotized by commercialism. She saw that the I. W. W. was defiant, that pacifists were unrebuked and that her propaganda here was allowed to do its work without molestation. She had no fear of the United States. Here is where she made a fatal mistake, and she soon realized that fact. Her confidence then changed to desperation. She saw that defeat was inevitable, and that her hope of wresting Africa from her enemies could have no fruition. Then she hastened to complete the seduction of Russia which had already been commenced. The primary object of this was, of course, to get Russia out of the war, but the secondary object was to acquire her lands by force and claim them at the peace table, as their's by conquest. Germany has felt the pangs of land hunger for many years. The German empire in Europe is in area 21 per cent less than the State of Texas and its population is nearly two-thirds as large as that of the United States. The need of territorial expansion is imperative. Well may Germany be desperate. Defeat looms big before her. Her African possessions are irretrievably lost. She will be forced to retire from Russia. All Nations distrust her and most Nations hate her. Without raw materials she cannot manufacture. She cannot produce these and nowhere can she buy them freely if at all. Germany knows that if defeated she will emerge from the war a decadent Nation. Her back is against the wall and she will fight till the last ray of hope is lost.

Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, says: "We should elect a Democratic House and Senate to prevent 'partisan strife during the war between a president of one party and a Congress of another,' and the Democratic press shouts 'Glory!' with campmeeting fervor. They have no need to worry about the Republicans. Ever since war was declared Republicans have been backing the President except when they have been ahead of him. We have noticed that in this advance guard were some distinguished Democrats, members of Congress, and not a few Democratic readers of The Journal. No President of the United States ever had such unanimous support as has been given to President Wilson. An insinuation that Republicans are not or will not be loyal to the administration in winning the war will win no votes.

Mr. Vance McCormick is Chairman of the War Trade Boards. He is also Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and acting in this latter capacity he will be able to discover a considerable number of "deserving Democrats" who are interested in war trade. We are sorry that Mr. McCormick has been called upon to assume these dual duties, because opportunity and temptation have led many an honest man into devious ways. As Chairman of the Democratic National Committee he is said to have issued a statement in behalf of "the administration candidates for Congress." If politics is adjourned, how does it happen that there are "administration candidates for Congress"?

There is now a great revelation of wholesale graft in government contracts and we read much about the vigor with which prosecutions are to be pressed and the dire punishment which is to follow conviction. Now that the horse has been stolen the stable door is to be locked. After this is done it may be wise to do away with the War Department policy of secret bidding for contracts. Some day the history of our "war contracts" will be given to the public. The people who have to pay the bills will some day insist on auditing the accounts.

It seems to have been decided that our first steps toward establishing order in Russia will be along the line of "commercial and industrial assistance." Accordingly a shipment of 50,000 pairs of shoes is to be sent there. This solution of the Russian problem could not have been worked out by a merely practical mind. It is evidently the work of a diplomat.

Need of Special Session

Put Before Governor and Council July 25th.

Hon. Harold M. Sewall of Bath, the chairman of the Maine Committee on Public Safety, appeared before the Governor and Council Thursday afternoon in favor of the calling of a special session of the Legislature to enact a law which would compel males between the ages of 18 and 50 years to be engaged in some useful business, profession or employment. Chairman Sewall addresses the Governor and Council as follows:

Impressed by the immediate necessity of the passage by our Legislature of a Compulsory Work Law similar to that of other States, after consultation with you, the committee on public safety sent out on July 3rd the following letter to the members of the 78th Legislature:

"The time has come in this country when every able-bodied man must fight to win this war, or work for the public welfare in some useful business, profession or employment."

"The Legislatures of Massachusetts and New York have empowered their governors to proclaim this duty upon all able-bodied males between the ages of 18 and 50 years, and proclamations to this effect have just been issued by the respective governors of these States."

"Information before this committee proves that Maine needs such a law and needs it now."

"The prosecution of the war admits no delay. The committee, therefore, wishes to know from you, and at your earliest convenience, whether as a member of the 78th Legislature you would respond to a call from the Governor, convening it in extraordinary session for the purpose of enacting this legislation, and to do so at your own expense, as a patriotic service to your State and country."

Herewith we have the honor to submit the replies thus far received. The replies number 161, 131 are unequivocally favorable; 13 also favor the law, but feel that expenses should be equalized for members from a distance. Three others, while not opposed to the law, express the same feeling regarding expenses. Three are inclined to doubt the advisability of a session in advance of the regular session and five are opposed; one has resigned, one has left the State, one is employed outside the State, one reserves the right to decide his vote after hearing the evidence and three have died.

A careful perusal of these letters shows on the most conservative basis, 145 members who will vote for the proposed law.

"In any enumeration of those who should be counted in favor of the proposed law it should be noted that two are in the navy, three in the army and two others in France on other service.

"Five of these, through their own letters or those of their families, endorse this law. Their voices speak to us, and out of the fullness of their sacrifices give us heed."

"Generous has been the response in numbers. It is the splendid spirit of these letters to which we wish particularly to invite your attention. It reflects as it should the spirit of the people of our State, who ask this law as a matter of patriotic necessity. If the reasons set forth in our circular letter addressed to the members of the legislature appealed to them so strongly, recent developments in this State have made these reasons ten-fold stronger. The evidence is all about us. It may be had also from other letters which we submit. It is also easily accessible to your Excellency through other channels, respected citizens and the police authorities of the State."

"In adopting a compulsory work law Maine will enter on no untried experiment. Seven States in the Union have such a law already. With the promulgation of this law by the neighboring State of Massachusetts the position of Maine is particularly opposed in this regard as refuge for slackers and underlings of both sexes from the outside, and the condition is rapidly growing worse."

"The proposed law covers a field not covered by the 'work or fight' regulations of the military authorities, for it reaches other ages and other classes, yet embodying the same principle."

"Your Excellency, this committee now urges upon you the convening of a special session of the legislature for the purpose and upon the conditions set forth in its letter to the members. By doing this now, rather than awaiting for the regular session, seven months will be saved in putting to work the unutilized manpower of our State at a time when the manpower of the nation must be strained to the utmost."

Halbert P. Gardner of Portland, executive secretary of the Maine Committee on Public Safety, addressed the governor and council, saying that the sentiment throughout the State was practically unanimous for the passage of such an act.

Governor Milliken took the matter under advisement.

VOLUNTEERS FOR ARMY UNDER 18 YEARS NOT WANTED

The minimum age limit for voluntary enlistment in the United States Army is fixed by Congress at 18 years. There have been so many applications for releases from the Army of boys under this age who have enlisted, that Adj. Gen. Henry P. McCain has issued the following circular letter:

"The large number of applications received from parents and guardians for the discharge of minors under 18 years of age, including satisfactory evidence that the soldier is under this age, indicates the necessity of more care on the part of recruiting officers in order to avoid unnecessary expense to the Government and annoyance to troops in the field in the subsequent discharge of such men, and to avoid placing a blot for life on the record of a boy whose offense of misstatement of his age arises usually from a patriotic desire to serve his country."

"Hereafter no applicant under the registration age will be accepted or enlisted until he has proven to the complete satisfaction of the recruiting officer that he has reached the age of 18 years. The boy required will be (a) birth certificate, baptismal record, or school certificate, or in case (a) is not available, (b) affidavit of parent or of guardian with legal evidence of guardianship."

OFFICERS OF 3RD MAINE.

The 3rd Maine Regiment of Infantry, National Guard, held its election of officers last Thursday evening, every officer but two of those qualified to vote being present at the meeting held in the Senate chamber at the State House. Adjutant General George McL. Presson presided, assisted by Major Charles E. Davis of the adjutant general's department.

The call for the election, General Orders No. 1, was read and the election resulted as follows: Colonel, H. M. Bigelow, Portland; Lieut. Colonel, L. D. Moulton, Portland; First Major, P. F. Chapman, Portland; Second Major, H. L. Pepper, Waterville; Third Major, F. Z. Brown, Dexter.

The Clear Call for Music

Now that the heavy clouds of war are darkening so many households the need for music is urgent. We need music at home to keep our spirits high and our confidence at the pitch it should be while our men are at the front fighting the meanest nation in the world. We need music in our armies to stimulate their enthusiasm and infuse in them the spirit that sends them singing into battle.

Of all musical instruments no other can offer such richness and variety as the

Write to the young men in the service of their country even if they are not in your immediate family. In a recent letter from France one of them voiced the sentiments of many when he said: "It will truly seem good to get some mail from you, for letters serve three useful purposes—they make you realize that someone cares a little for you, they carry you into the past and remind you of the happy days and they take you into the future when the Boche is licked and you are once again in the U. S. A."

Walter Mahoney of Northport was before Judge Maurice W. Lord in the municipal court, recently, on the charge of assault and battery, upon complaint of Dr. Prince E. Luce of Brooks, who has been staying recently at Northport. Mahoney pleaded not guilty, but admitted that he made the assault, stating that the difficulty began over the ownership of a pair of rubbers. The two men met on the highway, and according to Mahoney, Dr. Luce was wearing his (Mahoney's) rubbers. This, of course, was no defense for the assault, and Judge Lord bound Mahoney over to the Supreme Court under $200 bonds.

The new Telephone Directories were distributed Monday and were welcomed by all their subscribers as the last issue bore the date of summer 1917 and the constant changes, etc., had rendered them of little use. This issue has brought the service as far as possible up to date. Among the many suggestions the management says: "The Company will appreciate reports to the Chief Operator of specific instances of unsatisfactory service. Such reports will assist in locating any difficulty, whether of an operating nature or caused by some defect in the delicate and complicated mechanism of the telephone apparatus, and which may develop, even though every reasonable precaution has been taken."

"Satisfactory service on party lines depends very largely upon the willingness of the joint users to cooperate with one another in their demand on the service. The Company, accordingly, respectfully requests party line subscribers to limit their conversations to five minutes when others wish to use the line, and to give immediate right of way in case of emergency calls."

From a Bangor paper we copy the following item: "At a meeting of the Stockton Red Cross branch on the afternoon of July 23rd, Mr. Lewis Smith, Jr., field director, addressed the ladies present in a very pleasing manner. He spoke at length upon new branches of work which this chapter has never undertaken, expressing his appreciation of the work already accomplished. Several changes will be made by order of the government, especially in the matter of outfitting the boys in their home town. In future, no comfort kits or knitted goods will be given to them en route to camp; but they will be presented by the Red Cross at camp with everything needed before sailing. There is a great supply of surgical dressings, both in France and in America, and very soon this branch will discontinue the making of such articles and will take up a much more needed work—that of making garments for the peasant women and children of the war-ridden countries. The garments are very simply made of plain material. There will also be a new allotment of knitting soon. Two new committees are to be formed as follows: The first will consist of from three to five women, whose duty will be to see every boy who leaves town for military service and help to make everything comfortable for him, to assure him that he has only to ask the Red Cross for any necessary assistance and it will be given. The second committee, which is called the Civilian Relief for Home Service, is appointed to assist the members of soldiers' families. The duty of this committee, outside of any material assistance necessary, will be to answer questions of those who have members of their family in the service. Any question concerning those in service may be referred to this committee and it will do all in its power to solve the perplexity. Mr. Smith's address was most pleasing, and much which would have otherwise been difficult to understand was made clear by his interesting and forceful remarks."
